Our circular model promotes sustainability

Cotton roll towel removes 99.9% microbes* and produces up to 95% less waste than paper towels.

One cotton roll towel offers up to 110 individual hand dryings during one service cycle. In its life cycle, the cotton roll towel is washed and reused around 100 times (approximately equals to more than 20 000 pieces of folded paper).

A shared footprint is a smaller footprint

We aim to get more value from the existing products. We only order new batches of cotton roll towels and dispenser models when necessary, so there are no unused supplies in our customers' stocks or capital tied up in the inventory. We promote reusability, which helps share the footprint by several users.

Avoid overproduction – maximise the lifespan

We maximise the textile lifespan by designing for a long life with durable materials, by repairing, and by reusing. This also goes for the washroom dispensers.

Support a carbon-neutral future – choose the circular solution

At the end of their lifecycle, our cotton roll towels are upcycled to continue their journey as different products or as raw material for various industries. Our aim is to recycle 100% of our textile waste by 2025, and to offer all our customers carbon-neutral services by 2035.
